Differences between each type of Crispy Chip Product

Differences	Deep Frying: Open Frying	Vacuum Frying	Freeze Drying Feature
Production Process	Fried with oil and high temperature	Fried with oil and low temperature	No frying, no oil
Feature	Crispy, tough, and oilier than the vacuum fried one	Crispy, fluffy, delicious, absorb less oil than the deep fried one, taste and texture give a crunchy feeling like crispy snacks	Crispy, porous like a sponge, give a feeling of something melting in the mouth but not a crunchy feeling like crispy snacks
Nutritional Value	Low nutritional value (because of a large amount of oil and high calories)	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> - Help preserve color and taste - Contain a lot of dietary fiber - Fruits and vegetables still have some vitamins and minerals remaining - Use a low temperature, not exceeding 100 degrees Celsius, because it is fried in a closed system with pressure 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> - Maintain food quality similar to fresh food - Color, smell, and taste are similar to fresh food - Not heat treated, keeping nutritional value
